ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a locally distributed speech recognition system for converting spoken language into digitized readable text for a mobile communication device, characterized in that it comprises a preliminary

5   recognition means located in said mobile communication device and an interpreting means located remote from said mobile communication device and connected via a transmission facility with said mobile communication device.